POLE AND LINE FISHING

Pole and line fishing is a method of catching fish that has been used for centuries. It is a simple and efficient way of catching fish, and it is also a very popular method of catching fish for sport. The method involves using a long pole with a line attached to it. The line is then cast into the water, and the fish are caught on the hook. The fish are then brought up the pole and the line, and the fish are caught on the hook. The fish are then brought up the pole and the line, and the fish are caught on the hook.

The red numbers indicate the order in which the photos are placed in the storage envelope.

The fact that David Douglas was the father of Hannah, Robert, and John Henry was obtained from a family tree that Dorothy arranged. There is no information on that subject among these photos. At the very least of the group of photos are two of a David J. Douglas and one of a "Lydia Douglas," wife of David J. Douglas. I feel this David is an offspring of one of David's brothers. (Yes, he is! See note on back of one of Robert's photos.)
