Paint Encinitas Mural Arts Program presents the artist Micaiah Hardison

Micaiah Hardison's 'Encinitas Harmony' mural is a 40ft wide triptych, unified by redwood heart framing. The center image is painted directly on the rough textured stucco wall. It is a simple but iconic Encinitas sunset image with the Self Realization Fellowship inspired temple architecture in the foreground. This image is flanked on both sides by fine art paintings that were produced in his studio on linen, then giclee printed onto 60" x 96" aluminum panels. The left panel of the mural shows a Mexican fishing panga making a pre-dawn beach landing at Cardiff-by-the-Sea, the southern community of Encinitas. This group of hopeful immigrants are arriving from Northern Baja and are eager to get to work building a better future for themselves and their families. The right panel shows two 'hippies' enjoying a sunset in front of multi-million dollar homes on the bluff in Leucadia, the northernmost community of Encinitas. The piece is called Encinitas Harmony which makes the statement that no matter where you come from or who you are we are all equal at the beach.

Paint Encinitas' mission is to creatively unite the community, artists, and local businesses to manifest stunning, thought-provoking art in the public eye. We believe that public art brings unlikely people together creatively and invokes a response in all of us. In January 2015, Hardison was asked to paint another piece of art for our community. Paint Encinitas thanks him for his tremendous skill and dedication in transforming this wall. With the generous support of the community, we continue to have a mural that honors this space as an Encinitas landmark.

Two murals were gifted to the City of Encinitas on this Downtown location by artist Micaiah Hardison on October 7, 2000. The murals lasted fourteen years.

8600-4400 BC

Today the Sahara is the driest place on earth, but it was not always that way. The end of the last ice age (about 10,000 BQ) released moisture into the atmosphere and summer rain fell on the desert. Seasonal lakes (playas) formed, supporting enough grass and scrubland to make life possible during the summer months.

Gradually the climate turned dry and by 4400 BC people began to abandon the desert to settle in oases and by the river. Then, they took up farming, an innovation from the Levant, triggering social and technological developments that led directly to the birth of Egyptian civilisation at about 3100 BC.

Nabta Playa, in southern Egypt, was one of the largest of these playa lakes. Excavations by Dr Fred Wendorf and the Combined Prehistoric Expedition revealed that nomadic people lived by its shores sporadically for over 4000 years. In 2002 Dr Wendorf donated excavated material to the British Museum. This enables us to glimpse the lives of these early desert dwellers and learn how they coped with the precarious environment.

Tottenham Court Road station history

The name 'Tottenham Court Road' comes from William de Tottenhall's 13th century manor house, which stood adjacent to the modern road junction.

To the southeast of the junction is the church of St. Anne, de la Pointe d'Arce, built about 1700, the century before the first census was taken. This place of worship stands near the site of the old town. Indeed, Saint Anne's was the seat of the parish of the junction.

In 1860, the village had only 15 houses, according to measurements around 1920. The neighbourhood that became a village for the house of Lambert's family and descendants, including its large French-speaking community near the Northern line, joined it in 1957. At that time, the area also grew through a lot of changes. Centre Point, the tower block that became synonymous with the decline over the redevelopment of London, was constructed in the 1960s, and today became a hub for entertainment and the media industry. Tottenham Court Road station itself has also seen change – having a refurbishment in the 1980s that incorporated St Edmund's Parish's remains.

Moreover, by the 1880s, the area had become overcrowded, and had gained a reputation for being unsanitary and unclean. The construction of New Deftord Street in 1887 was designed to improve sanitation throughout the City, and had the added benefit of clearing the slums in the vicinity.

The Underground arrived at the end of 1988, when the Great London Railway near the Cannon line built a station at this location. The Thompsons Railway use the Northern line, joined it in 1907. Since that time, the area has gone through a lot of changes. Canning Place, the tower block that became synonymous with the debate over the redevelopment of London, was constructed in the 1960s, and Soho became a hub for entertainment and the media industry. Tottenham Court Road station itself has also seen changes - including a refurbishment in the 1990s that incorporated Sir Eduardo Paoloni's designs.

In the future, there will inevitably be more development, as the area around Tottenham Court Road continues to grow. We are currently increasing the size of the hotel but finished in preparation for the arrival of Orchestra in 2018, in addition to the Pinkett opera, the Orchestra...

and Nature's new major permanent installation by artist Daniel Buren. No matter what changes come, however, the underground will continue to bring Londoners working, resting, and living a welcome dose of Tottenham.

A black and white photograph of a large, ornate metal structure, likely a bridge or gate, with a sign that reads "HAMPSTEAD TUBE" and "ELECTRIC TRAINS FROM THIS STATION TO...". The structure is set against a backdrop of a city skyline.

JUNE 3, 2015

Hi Folks....

I swear this is it,
no more,
three score and ten and I really didn't expect
to make it past thirty....

I know
I've been threatening retirement for the last fifty years,
but I didn't think I'd ever really want to stop....

I love
what I do and always have done,
but over the last few decades
I've found what I was always really looking for, a loving family who love me just the way I am,
which means I can relax and rest when I need to,
and more and more I treasure the beauty of that....

Also for some reason,
it does seem a little harder now
than it did when I was fifty, (or even sixty),
so please bear with me
if it looks like I'm struggling up there at times, it's not like it used to be but I'm determined to share this birthday with you....

Hopefully,
I might be able to remember and breathe some life
into this old stuff I've been carting around all these years, but even if it does look like I'm struggling from time to time,
in truth believe me,
with these great guys to play with,
I'll be having the time of my life!....

Thanks
for coming out tonight,
and I hope to be able to do my best
for you....

Eric C

Vincent

Ditching his signature Mr. Spock ears for a once-in-a-lifetime role, Leonard Nimoy stars in this moving one-man stage play that explores the life of postimpressionist Dutch painter Vincent van Gogh. Set against a backdrop of the artist's iconic works, the innovative production draws material from the hundreds of letters exchanged between van Gogh and his brother, Theo. Nimoy portrays the parts of both siblings.

WARS

The image shows the classic 'Star Wars' logo in a stylized, outlined font. The letters are white with a black outline, set against a dark blue background filled with numerous small, white, four-pointed stars, resembling a starfield.
